A young man who sends us a badly written and blind letter, with many into know the qualifications of a compositor, as he desires to learn the trade. As type-setting is one of the great and most important industries of the day. it is natural that the public should feel an appreciative interest in those engaged in the praisworthy pursuit, therefore we give public answer. To be entirely clear we say to our correspondent that only a person of superior intelligence can become a thoroughly firsttal aptitude, he should not try to mas ter the printers trade, as he is sure to encounter indifferent success. Skill in deciphering manuscript, much of which is abominable and ought in justice never to be seen in the composing room in the shape it is sent there, is an accomplishment not easily acquired by a dull-witted or poorly educated person.
